DCOTA SPOTLIGHT

Mario Buatta's Fifty Years of American Interior Decoration

When I was a little boy, my mother said to me, "Piccolo Mario, what do you want to be when you grow up?" I shrugged, "I don't know—I don't want to play the violin like Poppa." "Maybe you should be an actor because you like to be on the stage." My brother said, "Well, maybe you should be a psychiatrist because you're so crazy." My father said, "Perhaps you should be a lawyer because you have such a big mouth." So I combined all three in order to become an interior decorator—an actor to convince my clients that I like their existing furniture, a psychiatrist to figure out what they like and don't like, and a lawyer to collect the bills!

—Mario Buatta

Prince of Chintz Mario Buatta is at it again—this time with his very first monograph. Written by Buatta with Emily Evans Eerdmans, Fifty Years of American Interior Decoration is part autobiography, part design book, and part comedy—the latter being immediately apparent from the first paragraph of chapter one (see excerpt at left). Published by Rizzoli and expected to hit bookshelves and accessorize low tables beginning this fall, the book celebrates the internationally acclaimed designer's impressive career, which dates back to the 1950s when he worked as an assistant in the decorating department at B. Altman & Co.

Buatta chronicles his well-designed life. He introduces himself as a boy who used to rearrange furniture in his family's English Tudor-style home on Staten Island, NY, and takes us through his journey of becoming and remaining arguably one of the most respected members of the design community today. He shares anecdotes about his personal and professional life; insights into his creative process; the evolution of his signature English Country House style; never-before-seen photographs from his own archive; and images of his instantly recognizable design work, many of which have been featured in the pages of Architectural Digest and other respected shelter publications. He also gives readers a peek inside his extraordinary projects, including Blair House, the Presidential guest quarters in Washington, D.C., the homes of some of his high-profile clients—Barbara Walters and Mariah Carey, to name a few—and a multitude of other New York pied-à-terres.

"He is a legend. And for good reason," Architectural Digest Editor Emeritus Paige Rense writes of Buatta in her forward to the book. "For fifty-some years he has designed extraordinary, traditional interiors combining fine design with shelter, comfort, and joy. His color palette cheers, delights, and offers emotional sustenance. It seems impossible to imagine being depressed in a Mario Buatta interior." "Personally, he also cheers and delights," she continues. "He is a practical joker. (Look out for gold-plated creepy-crawlies.)" Rense perfectly captures Buatta here—the man, the icon, and the jokester.

ALEXA HAMPTON DECORATING IN DETAIL

Celebrated designer and author of The Language of Interior Design takes us deeply into her process of selecting details for elegant, classic homes with inviting living rooms, bedrooms, dining rooms, kitchens, and other spaces.

In her first book, Alexa Hampton shared the basics of interior design--Contrast, Proportion, Color, and Balance--to rave reviews from readers and the media. In Decorating in Detail, Alexa shares the development process for eight elegant homes in locations from New York City to New Orleans. Walking readers through each room, she describes how she and the homeowners chose all of the elements, from textures to fabrics to furniture.

Sidebars on the best placement for lamps, outlets, and more (inspired by her popular Wall Street Journal "Where-to" column) and Sharpie drawings that show how she visualized the room's transformations help the reader build an unprecedented understanding of interior home design as a whole. Booksigning and reception follow the presentation.

Each lecture features prominent experts who focus on groundbreaking topics specific to the design trade, as well as seminars that are HSW (Health, Safety, Welfare) certified. Each seminar is followed by an informal reception hosted by a DCOTA showroom.
